REFERENDUM FOR MODERN WOODMEN.

Membership of Great Fraternal Society to Vote on New Rates.

COMMISSION TO SUPERVISE.

Confidence Expressed That Members Will Not Annul Action of Head Camp.

The Modern Woodmen of America, if they ask for it, will have a referendum on the new rates adopted by the Head Camp, the Society's sovereign legislative body, at Chicago in January 1912. This may be taken under the terms of the act adopted by the legislature of Illinois in special session last spring. It applies to fraternal beneficiary societies of Illinois with a membership of 75,000 or more which have increased rates since Jan. 1, 1912, and provides for a referendum on petition of camps or lodges representing ten per cent of the entire membership of the society.

All legislative authority in the Modern Woodmen of America is in the hands of a Head Camp composed of delegates selected by the members. It was the belief of some members of the general assembly that the state should not interfere in the affairs of a society having a representative form of government similar to its own, but, inasmuch as the legislature saw fit to authorize the referendum, the Society issued the blank petitions the day the law became effective, July 1, and forwarded the same to Camp Clerks with request for action. Enough petitions, it is stated, have been returned to warrant the taking of the referendum as soon as the Executive Council and the commission of three state officers for which the law provides shall prescribe its terms. The Executive Council took this position the more readily because convinced from reports that an overwhelming majority of the members of the Society will never consent to annul the action of the Chicago Head Camp.
